Offline Downloader

Offline Downloader is a free app that will save the content of a website and file for offline reading and navigation, but in a fun way. It will use the browser to fetch the Internet content and save them to a folder that you can connect. Offline Downloader can offer the best solution for the smaller websites, but the problem arises when you try to download something larger. Downloader supports a variety of storage media to save your data, including: Saved files to the SD card Macro SD cards Micro SD cards USB sticks A Micro SD card is the best option, because you won't need to purchase one of them. Offline Downloader is a free app that will save the content of a website and file for offline reading and navigation, but in a fun way. It will use the browser to fetch the Internet content and save them to a folder that you can connect. Offline Downloader can offer the best solution for the smaller websites, but the problem arises when you try to download something larger. This app uses the cache of the browser. And it sucks. I have found that if you have a 3G connection, the caching of the browser isn't acceptable. The system sees it as "newly arrived" and takes 3 hours or more to load the data to local disk. Also, you lose connectivity on the app (deafening sound), and the app cannot see if your internet connection is not available, because it uses the browser. If you don't have connectivity or the internet, this will eat hours off of your battery. It has never worked even close to where I've done it, so be prepared to go in your Settings or something. The only thing I like to see is that it should support the last version of Chrome for Android. This apps sucks. This is the only word that I use for this app. My Galaxy Nexus is rooted, but I have a 2.3 android version, and this app is useless. If you are on Android 4.0.4 or greater version, try it on your device. It's not worth the time to download and use this app. Offline-Downloader: - It works, but doesn't work good. - No update - No add-on How can someone be so arrogant and lie about so many things? A good app can not do what this one does. The other developers work for Google. Who created this app? (Or have you
