Fortunately, there are lots of tutorials on the internet to get you started. And, even if you start with a basic understanding, Photoshop is something to learn. It's a large canvas upon which you can create images that relate to your personal style and vision. I'd recommend starting with a simple task:

editing and sharpening a photograph, perhaps retouching your child's portrait, or improving a family portrait. When you feel confident, add color and a few digital artistic flourishes. Then, as you progress in your skill level, you can start integrating more. Preview an image of your favorite client or even a competing product. After you present, or just for recreation, Photoshop is a powerful tool to create stunning images. It's certainly a tool that takes time to master, but once you learn it, you want to have it with you wherever you go. If you have an airbrush, whether it's the cheapest one you can find or one that's rented, it's a tool that everyone uses to some degree. If you have many different tools to paint with, it is important to consider what you are creating. Should you be building a soup, then it is not going to be the best choice. If you are building your own arch for a hot tub, it is probably not good to an airbrush. If you are painting a shirt then use whatever you want to use. Paint brushes, feminine brushes, and airbrushes all have different applications and can be used to accomplish different things. An airbrush come to have a hard, thin paintbrush tip. Airbrushes can have a lot of different handles and controls. e3d0a04c9c
