MP3juices cannot convert videos into offline music formats, but they can play audio files once you have downloaded them. In January and February 2009, the band embarked on a West Coast US tour with main support from Smoke or Fire and various other acts opening each date.[7][8] On February 24, 2009, Coaster was announced for release in two months' time.[9] On March 3, the album's track listing and artwork were revealed.[10][11] On March 28, "The Quitter" was released for free download, while "Creeping Out Sara" was posted online on April 15, 2009.[12][13] They did a MySpace Transmissions session where they performed "The Quitter" and "My Orphan Year".[14] Following this, the band performed at the Punk Spring festival in Japan and Groezrock in Belgium soon after.[15][16] Coaster was made available for streaming through their Myspace on April 23,[17][18] before being released on April 28 through Fat Wreck Chords.[9] The album was the first new Fat Wreck Chords release priced under $10 in the US under the label's new promise that all CDs from the label would cost under $10, with many priced less than $8.[19] Regarding the label's new pricing model, NOFX lead singer and Fat Wreck Chords owner Fat Mike stated the following: The first link is used for streaming audio -- click on the link to have the player play the code practice as it receives it. It may also be used to download the code-practice file to disk for later playback. (In Windows, right-click on the link to the file you want to save to get a menu of options.) Not all MP3 players will treat the link the same, and some players may not work on the link type. Tracks are offered in a mix of 256Kbits/sec and 320Kbits/sec MP3 formats, DRM-free. We did have an issue downloading our first sample album, with the album in question unavailable for download for 12 hours after the initial order.
